As the truck appears to have sold, and is being picked up tomorrow PM, I'm going to go and clear out all my junk from it in a mo, and get all the spares together in a box. Then tomorrow I'm going to take it to the hand wash to get it cleaned for the new owner to get it all muddy again.

I just know now that its going to be emotional, so this afternoon I'm going to the Nags with my Pyrenees co-pilot to get very very drunk and raise a glass to send ol' Apache to his new life.

You got a skip? when I cleared the Saab out I didn't think you could get so much junk into a car. I did find a couple of CD's I'd been looking for though :D

Tis done.

Spares etc in a big box in the truck, all my crap in the shed. No more waking up in the back on a soaking wet freezing morning in Wales at 6am dying for a pee... most people would be happy about that. :!

Nope your gonna have to use a tent from now on and get used to being a passenger :)

12 months and you'll have another one :devil:

Vicki just said 'yes you might, but you wont have a wife!' :D

Ah well, easy come easy go!

Are you going to Wales in June?

And so it begins.... :D
I give it less than 12 months myself.

Edit: we will be visiting with a nice v8 truck sometime after march... Not to tempt you in any way of course. :D
