

View the complete version: General Grabber AT2's

Posted by: logey
Date: 07-02-2010 16:39:03

Just thought i'd add my 2 pennies worth, I know alot of you use these or the BF Goodrich AT's and since making the switch I can honestly say that for on-road in wet/muddy/snowy shitty conditions and for overall road noise and handling the General Grabber's are proving to be somewhat superior thus far. Effective longevity may be something that the BFG's may win on, i'll have to see. But so far, well worth the switch. Oh, and they're so much cheaper.

Posted by: Bio Hazard
Date: 07-02-2010 17:13:26

I have not tried the generals but cannot fault the bfg's..... then i do run MT muds most of the time

Posted by: steve s
Date: 07-02-2010 18:30:02

had my GGs on for a good 3 years the only prob was that i had too much pressure in the back tyres .fantastic .tyre money well spent :)

Posted by: Bushwhacker
Date: 07-02-2010 23:55:28

Same here, mine are about three years old now and still look good.
Liked them so much, bought a full set for the 3rd gen too, £590 for five delivered. (255/55/R18)