15 mins if you have to empty the airing cupboard. Leave it to SWMBO to put everything back, you'd only do it wrong anyway.

That would be ideal, No matter if it's chrome or grey or good or tatty, already got to sort out the rear on the 2.4 so i can sell it!

And i picked up a free tubular chrome bumper the other day off a mitsi pick-up, which i aim to make fit!!

BTW what colour is the lexurf gonna be Gra?

Al, Im reasonably sure that the lexurf us blue over silver. The current poomobile needs two new front tyres a d the tracking done. Actually there's a brand new spare on the back, do one new one. I will sort that soon. After today though, feel free to come pick it up, or come up with me one weekend when I'm home. I'm getting my new little runaround today...a 206 :/

But a w plate 2.0 litre gti thingy...it's frighteningly quick. Oh it's only done 17 miles in 3 years and i got it for £500.

As long as they are not full of large holes they should be fine mate.
I'm thinking of painting them in grey to match my truck, would look unusual but could be nice.

then I'll have a chrome front left over to go on the new truck when Gra takes the winch bumper off.

It wasn't very nice, it looked like I was trying to match the truck colour, which I was to be honest, but I wasn't happy with it and If I didn't change it I'd always have this 'what if' thought in the back of my mind.

Anyway, I'm happy with the latest look.

There are some good stories out there, aren't there. One chap has dedicated a site to the particular, ahem, problems he found after getting his truck back from them, if I recall correctly. That site is linked to somewhere over on HPOC.

The worrying thing about that, is that other truck has a very expensive, plug and play loom from Australia, so there shouldn't really be any wires on show. :!
