hey just a heads up for all you techno wizards :P

i bought the new HTC Desire the weekend there, and found a nifty little app today for it, what appears to be very similar to Memory Maps, i have just used it to track my passed 40mins driving and the mapping is very accurate.....

iPhone envy, it's a terrible thing (PT can be turned off on an iPhone, you don't have it at all) :P

Nice but it does not show the byways and you will need a o/s map to work from

I have memory map on my iPhone. Except until I turn off predictive text, it comes up as mammary tip...which I believe is code for nipple.

No iPhone envy here. Just refuse to buy one. I will have a gander and see if I can get OS maps for it.

I refused for years. But it was a stupid, self spiting, exercise; it's honestly the best gadget I've ever owned. I can even phone people with it...

And I can agree with you, parked in a residential street in barking...but not in a hummer. Today I'm in a 6.8 litre v10 ford excursion. It gues very well indeed. Almost as well as my iPhone.

Ahhhh, the Excursion...

12 yards long, 2 lanes wide,
65 tons of American Pride!

Canyonero! Canyonero!

Top of the line in utility sports,
Unexplained fires are a matter for the courts!

Canyonero! Canyonero!

Most excellent sir!

And trev, I've done 80.2 miles...in half a tank!

That's 75 litres or about 4.8 to the gallon...bargain!
