What's the problem ?

You've got loads of time yet !

:lol:

I'm with Rich on this one. Just tell her she should be damned grateful you're still with her so that she can even consider celebrating another wedding anniversary. Women these days just don't know how lucky they are. Give them cards and presents when your mere presence around them is more than enough? They can dream...

Presents? PRESENTS? I said feckall about buying presents. The card cost £2.50p thats more than enough :yikes:. Its just a case of self preservation. I like to eat my dinner not wear it and the card "proves" I hadn't forgot. As if I would, my wallet still cringes at the thought of the new handbag forgetting cost me the last time :cry1:

Yes goodwill unto all men andthe last time I looked I was married to a woman so it doesn't count.

How about that for quick thinking? told you I used to work with a bunch of Yorkshire lads. They trained me well

Obviously not well enough, if you're willing to spend £2.50 on a card.

Vicki arranged that we got married on my birthday - apparently so I'd never forget our anniversary.

Sorry, but with something so important as my birthday happening, how can I be expected to remember anything else?
