

View the complete version: I am quote close to spitting coffee at the screen.

Posted by: gwh200
Date: 06-12-2010 23:57:56

As title.

Posted by: Albannach
Date: 07-12-2010 00:09:11

Why?

Posted by: gwh200
Date: 07-12-2010 00:12:43

Because some bloke died.

Posted by: Albannach
Date: 07-12-2010 00:16:20

A while ago?

Posted by: gwh200
Date: 07-12-2010 00:21:35

30 years apparently. It's made someone sob a lot...I'm still sat here open mouthed at the most bizarre post I think I've ever read!

Posted by: Albannach
Date: 07-12-2010 00:32:35

Yep, I'm the same. I wrote a reply, but didn't have the heart to send it.

Posted by: gwh200
Date: 07-12-2010 00:37:53

Just plain...well...odd!

Posted by: Albannach
Date: 07-12-2010 00:42:06

I don't understand why he posted what he did. Having said that, I don't understand a lot of them next door.

Posted by: gwh200
Date: 07-12-2010 01:02:07

It's a sort of pattern. Lots of strange people arrive, then before you know it, they're gone. The dude with the bacofail discs springs to mind. He seemed to suffer a burn out of some description. I spose my point is, it goes round and soon all the normal people will be there...but your dead right andy...there are some oddballs there lately.

Posted by: biosurf

Date: 07-12-2010 08:11:39

At risk of getting a wee bit psychobullshit about it I'm sure it's something about people not knowing how to mourn the people they really should so it comes out via mourning a celebrity they have never met.

Don't get it though

It made me look at one of my closest (and until this point seemingly normal) friends in an entirely different light when he and the bundle of assorted neurosis with tits that he was with at the time made a pilgrimage up to London and laid a wreath for Diana when she died.

Never knew her, never met her and never to my knowledge expressed any interest in her.

Odd.

Posted by: Matt

Date: 07-12-2010 12:21:45

It's only odd to the likes of us because we can think without someone creating those thoughts for us, and can sit in a room of people without giving a toss what they think of us. Most people can't. They have to fit in. Showing fake concern is one of those ways. Perish the thought that anyone might say the Beatles were bog standard fare or that Diana was a digger who knew how to play people. Neither being any more of a loss than most others. People just knew of them, hence it looks good with the other sheep to say that they give a toss.

Posted by: steve s

Date: 07-12-2010 17:45:20

i would like to fit in (i think)i never want to offend people but i have this uncontrollable way of giving my opinion ,its not that i want or need others to agree its just i want to here there opinion and if it makes sense or should i say more sense than mine ill change my opinion .the problem is others tend not to play and sit there with an i know better look on there face i then wish i had kept my mouth shut and feel bad .i could quite happily live with out 99% of people as long as I'm in the countryside and have animals around ,but that makes me odd to the rest so ill just have to keep working with and being around people as thats the norm .you lot are OK as none of you exist you are all computer generated so i can switch you off anytime i like but real people (general speaking)tend to be a pain in the arse :rolleyes:

Posted by: Brummie

Date: 07-12-2010 18:08:07

How many times have we got to tell you stop bending over for any body, be a little selective and always carry your KY gell with you. :D :D

Posted by: meooo

Date: 07-12-2010 18:42:16

 Brummie wrote:

How many times have we got to tell you stop bending over for any body, be a little selective and always carry your KY gell with you Matt. :D :D

Fixed that :lol:

Posted by: meooo

Date: 07-12-2010 18:44:13

 steve s wrote:

i would like to fit in (i think)i never want to offend people but i have this uncontrollable way of giving my opinion ,its not that i want or need others to agree its just i want to here there opinion and if it makes sense or should i say more sense than mine ill change my opinion .the problem is others tend not to play and sit there with an i know better look on there face i then wish i had kept my mouth shut and feel bad .i could quite happily live with out 99% of people as long as I'm in the countryside and have animals around ,but that makes me odd to the rest so ill just have to keep working with and being around people as thats the norm .you lot are OK as none of you exist you are all computer generated so i can switch you off anytime i like but real people (general speaking)tend to be a pain in the arse :rolleyes:

You been watching Tron? :D

Posted by: steve s

Date: 07-12-2010 19:03:38

 meooo wrote:

 steve s wrote:

i would like to fit in (i think)i never want to offend people but i have this uncontrollable way of giving my opinion ,its not that i want or need others to agree its just i want to here there opinion and if it makes sense or should i say more sense than mine ill change my opinion .the problem is others tend not to play and sit there with an i know better look on there face i then wish i had kept my mouth shut and feel bad .i could quite happily live with out 99% of people as long as I'm in the countryside and have animals around ,but that makes me odd to the rest so ill just have to keep working with and being around people as thats the norm .you lot are OK as none of you exist you are all computer generated so i can switch you off anytime i like but real people (general speaking)tend to be a pain in the arse :rolleyes:

You been watching Tron? :D

fantastic ,this pc game even answers back