Recieved a phone call this morning from local hospital to say I have to get back to the UK urgently to see a lung specialist :no: :no:

Appears my doctor has got concerned over my recent X rays, and wants something checking out in a hurry. So I am now in Naples airport waiting for my flight back to see what all the panic is about. :o

Bang goes my overtime for the next three weeks as I have had to hand over to another PM to see the jobs through.

Cheers Fella's, I'm fairly sure it's just crap lingering on from the building site I lived at for 9 months. There is always a small chance he could be right so heading in to hospital tomorrow to find out.

Ian thanks for the offer, but missus will be home in time to drop me in. She can park in the uni only 5 mins away.

Well spent four hours having tests done to come out no further on than when I went in.

Have to go back in a few days for a CT scan and possible biopsy depending on the scan results.

Bugger, you posted that about the same time I texted you. Glad I've got 100's of the barstewards to use. I think I don't use a months allowance in a year. :D :D

Well, i went and spent another few hours hanging around and being prodded and poked again, but finally the results are in.

I HAVE BEEN GIVEN THE ALL CLEAR FOR THE DREADED CANCER :D :D :D :D :D :D

Seems I have sustained some scarring/damage in the left lung, which is what kicked this all off, along with an infection which is still kicking around.

So now back on the meds to try and get rid of the last of the infection :cool:
