

View the complete version: Fucking hell why do i bother getting a job

Posted by: Bio Hazard
Date: 19-01-2012 21:15:33

Back in May i got what i thought was a good job now just been told i will be worst off than the job i left if the planned changes go through guess who is now looking for work again.....

Posted by: meooo
Date: 19-01-2012 21:47:37

Me

Posted by: meooo
Date: 19-01-2012 21:49:51

Maybe we should join forces.....Sure I can learn to produce biogas ... :D :D

Posted by: Bio Hazard
Date: 19-01-2012 21:53:02

:lol: :lol: :lol:

 meooo wrote:

Maybe we should join forces.....Sure I can learn to produce biogas ... :D :D

Posted by: That_Ruddy_Squirrel
Date: 19-01-2012 21:55:28

Sorry to hear that guys, fingers crossed you get (better than your current) replacement jobs soon

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 19-01-2012 23:06:40

 Bio Hazard wrote:

Back in May i got what i thought was a good job now just been told i will be worst off than the job i left if the planned changes go through guess who is now looking for work again.....

explain yourself.....

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 20-01-2012 10:28:00

:/

Without more detail I've no idea if it's relevant but I should point out that they can't make changes to your employment contract without your consent ...

:mad:

Posted by: Matt

Date: 20-01-2012 12:35:39

That's a bugger chaps. Fingers crossed you get sorted.

Posted by: Bio Hazard
Date: 20-01-2012 16:26:32

Cut in hours , cut in shift allowance and a change in shift that increases my traveling by 80 miles :(

Posted by: Matt
Date: 20-01-2012 16:31:33

On a similar note, our Gert's just been handed a contract to sign, (never signed one in all the time she's been there so far), so I need to check it, but I'm guessing her place is trying something on. Seems to be becoming the norm of late.

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 20-01-2012 19:11:34

 Bio Hazard wrote:

Cut in hours , cut in shift allowance and a change in shift that increases my traveling by 80 miles :(

Have you got this in writing or is this still all verbal?

Cost out your additional travelling per week say 45p a mile and negotiate that back into this.

Is this temporary?

Are your weird people with the new machines the only ones affected or is it company wide?

If you have it in writing get someone to check the small print in case they are sneaking a little procedural change to t&c's through

Go to the pub and cheer up

In life as one door closes another opens

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 20-01-2012 19:19:12

:/

If any of the things that are being changed are in your contract then they can't change them without your agreement ...

As for Gert, if she's been working for any length of time without a contract then I believe that the conditions etc she's been working under are deemed in law to be contractually binding - for what it's worth the company are actually in breach as they haven't provided her with a contract !

Unfortunately in the current climate it takes a lot of balls to tell the company to FO when they pull strokes like these :(

:mad:

Posted by: Bio Hazard
Date: 20-01-2012 19:50:52

 abecketts wrote:

 Bio Hazard wrote:

Cut in hours , cut in shift allowance and a change in shift that increases my traveling by 80 miles :(

Have you got this in writing or is this still all verbal?

Cost out your additional travelling per week say 45p a mile and negotiate that back into this.

Is this temporary? 2 years

Are your weird people with the new machines the only ones affected or is it company wide? company wide

If you have it in writing get someone to check the small print in case they are sneaking a little procedural change to t&c's through

Go to the pub and cheer up

In life as one door closes another opens

Already been offered two other jobs slightly less than on now but better than i will be on

Posted by: shokenore

Date: 20-01-2012 20:03:31

Good luck with the job offers, hope it all goes well.