Hello all! :D

I'm still looking for an old Surf propshaft if anyone has one. Not too keen on paying much for it as it's gonna be cut up.

I've still got the girly motor - the MX5. It's fab fun in the summer though not so great this weather. Vicki has a Citroen DS3, which is great! No plans for another Surf really - no-one seems to be offroading these days, and I hear lanes are closing all the time, and cant really justify something that big and hungry given the short distances I travel these days!

Quite busy with the hifi gubbins these days - servicing, buying and selling. See <https://www.facebook.com> but still in EMC for the day job.

Nice to see some familiar names still kicking around...

Hello stranger :D

Welcome back to fruit cake central - when you see Brummie and abecketts you will know what i mean.

Meanwhile Matt's still playing with his :gasmask: in the hole in his garden :lol:

I see Matt is still keen on editing bits out of your posts. North Hill Audio, on Facebook!

Good to see everyone still has the same avatar too! :D

I'm blameless, for once. :D That's just the way the parser crops the visible portion of a link, to prevent links scrolling way across the screen.

Good to see you're still alive. Was beginning to wonder. :D How's the buying & selling going. Worth the time and effort I hope?

Not really, but I enjoy it. eBay is shit for buying broken hifi these days. The amount of stuff for sale is probably 1/10th of what it was last year, and half of that is cheap chinese crap. Most of my trade comes from Facebook or the local record shop these days, rather than eBay.

How's things with you these days? Still building that rope driven steam powered workshop?

Aye, I'm still dicking about with the shed and collecting old stuff. Haven't got owt recently though. Working on getting the stuff which is already here in order now, rather than just keep adding more projects to the list.

Have I missed something? Abecketts Disco has a problem? How strange that something has fallen off a Lame Rover :whistle:

So speaks the man who lives about 3 miles from the Lode Lane site :/
