That's gonna be a killer on our roads - can you imagine hauling an extra 45kg (and that's before SWMBO loads it with crap) up any sort of hill !!

Hell you would be overtaken by a Reliant Robin towing Brummie's static tin snail !

NOT for me

Will they need the stupidly oversized wing mirrors to see behind them?

imagine the fun if you were to ride to the West Country with one in the height of summer :devilish:

Normal tin snails are cursed at, how busy would the swear box be for that thing ?

Hmmmmmmmm Bob needs to keep fit, and we need a forum party, his keeping fit cycling along towing that would soon fill a swear box to pay for he forum party :whistle:

:lol:

The phrase F U C K O F F springs to mind ...

My knees dislike cycling - if I do 2 miles each way to work by the third day my knees will need to be strapped up and I'd be on NSAIDs for a week. I'm sticking to my tin tent - in fact it's parked outside and I'm sorting a few things out for Easter weekend :devil:

:cool:

clearly Bob in in good heart, probably fine for camping in the netherlands where it's nice and flat most of the time

Not to mention cold and damp ! If you sit watching the autoroutes in France you'll see that even the Dutch prefer caravanning much further south :D

Off to Cheddar for Easter and over towards Northampton for Whitsun - summer looks like being further north but the location is being kept under wraps as we may have to pass close to the GGT !

:whistle:

There's only one saving grace for the feckin things.. The twat pulling it wont be able to get up the inside at the traffic lights after you have just struggled to find enough room to overtake them. :devilish:

And all that can be heard as the Lycra clad wassock rides by is the screech as the mini tin snail scratches it's way past your pride and joy
