So, it's like 02:00, the car park has 199 empty spaces.
One car in car park.....mine

So why the f..k does this twit have to drive right across the Empty bloody car park to park so close to my car that I can't open my drivers door to get in and move it elsewhere?

Was it Bob ?

Or was the driver trained by Brummie ?

It's every night, if there are one or two left in there, the next one in has to park as close as possible to one of the others
And if the car park is totally empty I've seen drivers drive around for five minutes or more deciding where to park, unbelievable really :rolleyes:

I see your vehicle is a twat magnet too then. :D It's like they think their car is safer if it's next to another. Most people are bloody weird is all I can say. :D
