

View the complete version: Harvest hiatus

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 25-09-2018 15:41:50

Sunday proved interesting as my appendix failed and off to GWH I went for removal. Came home yesterday with my midrift feeling like it has done 12 rounds with Anthony Joshua.

To have to rest in the middle of harvest is quite interesting as concepts go so I'll probably go buy another Alfa to cheer myself up.....

Posted by: That_Ruddy_Squirrel
Date: 25-09-2018 19:08:02

Hope you heal up soon, take care old bean

Posted by: Bio Hazard
Date: 25-09-2018 20:14:44

Bugger. I have to come and make your life miserable.☹☹

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 25-09-2018 20:27:09

 That_Ruddy_Squirrel wrote:

Hope you heal up soon, take care old bean

Why thank you squirrel

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 25-09-2018 20:28:00

 Bio Hazard wrote:

Bugger. I have to come and make your life miserable.☹☹

As if that would happen, a: you turn up and b: you annoy me

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 26-09-2018 18:22:35

Hi did turn up but didn't annoy me, usual half a job.....

Ask him about vw gearboxes he is so happy to be working with one at the moment.

Posted by: That_Ruddy_Squirrel
Date: 26-09-2018 19:34:40

you better cheer him up by buying another Alfa to fix then :-)

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 27-09-2018 03:28:56

:lol:

Nice to see that you're still living in interesting times :whistle:

Will there be a Pinot Noir this year ?

:cool:

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 27-09-2018 08:28:21

 Predictable Bob wrote:

:lol:

Nice to see that you're still living in interesting times :whistle:

Will there be a Pinot Noir this year ?

:cool:

Yarp, indeed

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 27-09-2018 18:22:03

:D

Excellent - the boy and I will be round when you set it free !!!

He's currently sat in Lyon airport waiting for a delayed flight home - he's had to go to Hermitage, meet Michel Chapoutier and sample his wines ...

Apparently it was a real struggle - I wish I'd known there were jobs like that 40 years ago !

:lol:

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 28-09-2018 07:14:46

 Predictable Bob wrote:

:D

Excellent - the boy and I will be round when you set it free !!!

He's currently sat in Lyon airport waiting for a delayed flight home - he's had to go to Hermitage, meet Michel Chapoutier and sample his wines ...

Apparently it was a real struggle - I wish I'd known there were jobs like that 40 years ago !

:lol:

Poor kid, must be awful having to work in that sort of set up.....

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 28-09-2018 18:55:13

:lol:

He suffered in the end - 5 hr delay at Lyon and the M23 was closed so he didn't get back until 02:30 !!!

:lol:

Posted by: That_Ruddy_Squirrel
Date: 06-10-2018 08:36:18

You getting better oh Grape Crusher ?

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 08-10-2018 21:38:36

I'm up and about and now not sweating buckets but I can't lift anything for another 4 weeks or so, tomorrow is another picking day and my contribution will be to make tea and lunch and to drive a truck to the winery.

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 10-10-2018 20:20:43

:D

Management at its finest !

Have you coughed or sneezed yet ?

:devil:

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 11-10-2018 13:07:53

Bob, your concern is immesurable, i am without cough or sneezes, I am able to do a normal day as long as it does not involve lifting anything.

We picked 6 tonnes of pinot noir and there is still more out there which will go into a pink sparkling but we have red galore.

Posted by: Predictable Bob
Date: 13-10-2018 06:34:32

:lol:

Sir, you mistake my interest in your health for concern ...

One of the more interesting effects of my own surgery was the severe discomfort caused by coughing which paled into insignificance compared to the screaming agony that ensued why I was caught by a surprise sneeze around 6 weeks after the operation :devil:

Am I right to presume that the Pinot crop is inflicted with high quality as well as quantity ? I have relatively recently come to appreciate the flexibility of PN when it comes to food as well as the variations due to terroir etc but have yet to taste a really excellent British one ...

:cool:

Posted by: abecketts
Date: 14-10-2018 17:07:08

Bob, I've passed the sneeze, cough, fart and yell test so there should be no surprises.....hopefully.

The pinot was quality and quantity, so clean and ripe.

Posted by: That_Ruddy_Squirrel
Date: 14-10-2018 19:12:05

Tht's good news, hope the healing continues well :-)

